

CONTRIBUTORS

Articles

Lydia Wevers has recently retired as Director of the Stout Research Centre. A New Zealand Studies specialist, she has published on literature, book history, the history of place and travel writing. She is currently working on an overdue Marsden funded book on the history of reading, from which her W.H.Oliver lecture is drawn.

Ben Schrader is a Wellington historian specialising in urban history and the history of the built environment. His latest book was the award-winning The Big Smoke: New Zealand Cities 1840-1920 (Wellington, 2016). He is presently part of a Royal Society-funded project exploring eviction in New Zealand and is also co-writing a history of New Zealand historic preservation.

Michael Matthew Roche is a Professor of Geography, School of People Environment and Planning at Massey University. An historical geographer he has written mainly about forestry and agriculture in New Zealand. His work has been included in the Historical Atlas of New Zealand, The Dictionary of New Zealand Biography and Te Ara.

Minette Hillyer teaches in the School of English, Film, Theatre and Media Studies at Victoria University of Wellington; her most recent publication ("Camera Documents Made at Home: Visual Culture and the Question of America" Film History 27.4, 2015. 46-75) considers the use of ethnographic images in postwar American popular culture.

David Hall successfully completed a PhD thesis in 2016 working with the School of History at Victoria University of Wellington, and a book based on his thesis, entitled Emerging from an Entrenched Colonial Economy: New Zealand Primary Production, Britain and the EEC, 1945-1975, has now (2017) been published in the Palgrave Economic History series.

Jon Henning is a graduate of Auckland and Otago Universities, is currently a union organiser and has written a number of essays on labour history and industrial relations issues. These have been published in the New Zealand Journal of History and the New Zealand Journal of Employment Relations.

Reflections

Peter Clayworth is a freelance historian, based in Wellington, who has previously worked for the Waitangi Tribunal, the Department of Conservation, and Te Ara the encyclopedia of New Zealand. He is currently writing a biography of labour activist Pat Hickey.

Book Reviews

Jared Davidson is an historian, writer, and archivist at Archives New Zealand.

Professor Peter Lineham is a Professor in History at Massey University.

Jim McAloon, Associate Professor in the School of History at Victoria University of Wellington.

Malcolm Menzies has had a long-standing interest in the future of New Zealand/Aotearoa, and has filled numerous roles in and around the public sector.

Dr Mike Ross is a Lecturer at Te Kawa a Māui, Victoria University, where he teaches courses on Māori language and customs.

Tim Rowse is Emeritus Professor at the Institute for Culture and Society, Western Sydney University.

Dr Geoff Watson is a Senior Lecturer in History at Massey University, Palmerston North.

Melissa Matutina Williams is the author of the award-winning book, Panguru and the City: Kāinga Tahi, Kāinga Rua: An Urban Migration History, BWB, 2015.