NEW ZEALAND STUDIES
[formerly the Stout Centre Review]
NOVEMBER 1995: VOLUME FIVE – NUMBER THREE

Page 3
CAROLE VAN GRONDELLE
An elegant and intelligent beauty
The Hollywood film career of Nola Luxford

Page 9
EDMUND BOHAN
James Edward FitzGerald (1818-1896)
Intellectual of all trades and
New Zealand’s political meteor

Page 13
MARTIN LODGE
Prelude and Allegro:
an approach to the music and life of
Anthony Watson

Page 18
JOHANNA MARY
Amy Bock
and the western tradition of passing women

Page 22
REVIEWS & PREVIEWS
EXHIBITION: Blackwood & Janet Paul
JOHN ROBERTS on The Radio Years
IAN CARTER on Building the New World

ABOVE: Nola Luxford, New Zealand Hollywood hopeful, on roller skates, c1912.
COVER: A studio portrait of Nola Luxford taken in the 1920s.
New Zealand Studies

formerly the Stout Centre Review
ISSN 1173-6348

Editor
J.M. Thomson
Assistant
Lisa Larkindale
Design and production
Roger Joyce
Secretary
Valerie Jacobs

New Zealand Studies is a multidisciplinary journal reflecting the research interests of the Stout Research Centre, Victoria University of Wellington. Membership of the Stout Research Centre is $35. This supports the work of the Centre, entitles participation in seminars and other activities and includes subscription to New Zealand Studies. Address all inquiries to: The Secretary Stout Research Centre Victoria University of Wellington PO Box 600, Wellington, NZ. Telephone +64-4-471 5305 Facsimile +64-4-496 5439

STOUT RESEARCH CENTRE

FOR THE STUDY OF NEW ZEALAND SOCIETY, HISTORY AND CULTURE

Director
Allan Thomas
Secretary
Valerie Jacobs
Advisory board
Bill Renwick (Convener)
John Andrews
Margaret Calder
Jim Collinge
Charlotte Macdonald
David Mackay
Elizabeth McLear
Joan Metge
Claudia Orange
Tony Simpson
J.M. Thomson

Celebrating a productive year

Despite the flurries of contradictory winds and gales, the Stout Research Centre may be said to be flourishing. An overall list of the publications which it has nurtured and sponsored has yet to be compiled but the case of books installed in the entrance hall is now full to overflowing. Perhaps this may seem a boastful note on which to begin an editorial marking the end of the fifth year of our publication but this issue well illustrates the diversity of work going on within the Centre. Martin Lodge, a former Fellow and now lecturer in music at the University of Waikato, writes on the tragic life of the gifted New Zealand composer Anthony Watson, whose major works are now readily available on CD and in score, published by the Waite-ata Press of Victoria University. Edmund Bohan, the current Fellow and a notable opera singer, gives a tantalising glimpse of the subject of his next biography in his article on Edward Fitzgerald. His greatly-praised study of Stafford reached the final stages of the Montana Book Awards.

The articles on Nola Luxford and Amy Bock traverse quite different territores, the former as an actress in the silent film era of Hollywood, the latter as one of the first New Zealand cross-dressers. Studies in popular themes are now taken for granted in numerous universities – the divisions between high and low (or popular) culture are being dissolved. Until the advent of the large-scale pop scene entrepreneurs in the 1960s there were fewer rifts within the cultural spread. T.S. Eliot could write as vividly on Marie Lloyd in the music hall as he could on Dante.

There have been gains in other areas as well. The recent one-day conference on the great International Exhibition of 1906–1907 at Christchurch will result in a symposium to be published in association with the Museum of New Zealand, when it opens in early 1998. The Conference itself was the subject of a Concert FM documentary by Paul Bushnell, broadcast on 14 and 16 October, in which various participants spoke and Edmund Bohan, accompanied by Margaret Nielsen, sang the pastoral song, ‘Tillage and Shepherd­ing’, part of Alfred Hill’s Exhibition Ode, the first time it had been heard, most probably, since its original performance on 7 November 1906.

In February next year, before the official opening of the 1996 session of Parliament, another Stout Research Centre event will be focused on the newly-refurbished Parliamentary buildings, when a one-and-a part-day conference will be held on Sir Keith Holyoake entitled ‘Towards a Political Biography’. Those who know Sir Keith only from his monumentally-booted statue in Molesworth Street are likely to be surprised. As Robert Chapman put it in The Oxford History of New Zealand: ‘A master of consensus-making, Holyoake happily ran a Cabinet where he listened, quizzed and quietly commanded for eleven years’. A final date has yet to be fixed for the conference, a feature of which is that the former MP’s Association is cooperating in its organisation so there will be an input of political and public service expertise.

Finally, only a handful of copies remain of the March 1995 issue which featured the speech of the President of the Czech Republic, Vaclav Havel, which was published subsequently in a variety of sources, including New Zealand books and the New York Review of Books. To have been able to publish such a fine address made a satisfactory conclusion to five years of editing this journal under its original title. The greatly differing nature of the three issues of 1995, including that on Maori Language, well illustrated the range and purpose of the publication. As the journal changes its name to New Zealand Studies, your editor has decided the time is now opportune to hand over to a successor who can develop it further under its new rubric. In retrospect, the ‘only begetter’ of the Stout Centre Review should be saluted at this point for his vision and perspicience – the former Director, Jim Collinge – as should the first and most devoted designer – Roger Joyce – as well as the Lynch-pin of the whole enterprise, our secretary Valerie Jacobs.

J.M. THOMSON