

CONTRIBUTORS

Articles

Nazila Alinaghi is a Research Fellow at the Victoria University of Wellington, Chair in Public Finance where she specialises in public economics, labour economics, income distribution, and applied econometrics. She holds a PhD in Economics from the University of Canterbury.

Philip Armstrong is a Professor of English at the University of Canterbury. His scholarly publications include books on Shakespeare, on animals in literature, and on human-animal relationships in the culture and history of Aotearoa New Zealand. He has also published a book of poems, Sinking Lessons (Otago University Press 2020), which won the Kathleen Grattan Award in 2019.

Matthew Johnson completed a Ph.D in history from the University of Waikato in 2018. He examined the POW experience of New Zealanders in Europe and North Africa during the Second World War. Currently he is an independent early career researcher.

Jacqueline Leckie, a historian and anthropologist, is an adjunct research fellow with the Stout Centre for New Zealand Studies at Victoria University of Wellington, and conjoint associate professor in the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at the University of Newcastle. In 2018 she was the J.D. Stout Research Fellow. Her research has concerned mental health, the Indian diaspora, gender, ethnicity, and work within Asia–Pacific. Her latest book was Colonizing Madness: Asylum and Community in Fiji (2020) and Invisible. New Zealand's History of Excluding Kiwi-Indians is in press.

Steven Loveridge holds a PhD in history from Victoria University of Wellington and works from the Stout Research Centre for New Zealand Studies. He has written on subjects ranging across military history, foreign policy, security intelligence, business history, cartooning, reactionary politics and consumer culture. His latest book is the co-authored The Home Front (MUP, 2019), an authoritative history of New Zealand society during the First World War.

Lisa Marriott is Professor of Taxation and Associate Dean (Research) at Te Herenga Waka Victoria University of Wellington, and Extraordinary Professor at the University of Pretoria, South Africa. Lisa's research interests include taxation, social justice and inequality.

Paul Moon is Professor of History at Auckland University of Technology. His most recent work is a biography of James Busby (Bloomsbury, 2020).

Michael Roche is an historical geographer and Professor of Geography in the School of People Environment and Planning at Massey University, Manawatu Campus, Palmerston North.

Dr Paerau Warbrick is a senior lecturer in Tumu: School of Māori Pacific and Indigenous Studies at the University of Otago. He teaches courses covering Māori history, politics and law. He is also a barrister who specialises in Māori land, trusts, wills and estates. He belongs to a number of iwi in the Upper North Island, though his principal iwi is Ngāti Awa.

Dr Derek R. Whaley is a Research Librarian at Auckland Libraries with a wide range of historical interests from medieval French royalty to North Auckland transportation and thoroughfares to the railroads of Santa Cruz County, California.

Roswyn Wiltshire recently graduated with a MA in Classics from the University of Canterbury, where she was also employed for three years at the Teece Museum of Classical Antiquities. She is at present reading for a DPhil Classical Archaeology at the University of Oxford.

Reflections Section

Nick Bollinger is a Wellington-based writer, critic and broadcaster. He is the author of Goneville: A Memoir (2015) and presenter of The Sampler on RNZ National. He is the 2021 JD Stout Research Fellow and is researching the counterculture in New Zealand, 1960-1975, towards a book to be published in 2022.

Book Reviews

Emalani Case teaches Pacific Studies at Te Herenga Waka Victoria University of Wellington and is the author of Everything Ancient Was Once New: Indigenous Persistence from Hawai'i to Kahiki (2021).

Grace Moore teaches in the English Department at the University of Otago and is the author of Dickens and Empire (2004).

Suddhabrata Deb Roy is a PhD. Candidate in the Department of Sociology, Gender Studies and Criminology in the University of Otago.

Ruth Balint teaches History at the University of New South Wales. She is the author of Destination Elsewhere: Displaced Persons and their Quest to Leave Postwar Europe (Cornell University Press, 2021).

Margot Schwass is the author of All the Juicy Pastures: Greville Texidor and New Zealand (Victoria University Press, 2019).

Melissa Kennedy is Professor of English at the University College of Education in Upper Austria.